Not illustrated. 1901 Excerpt: ... Melton Prior. A pencil drawing in less skilful hands is apt to go to pieces on the press. Mr. C. G. Harper, in his excellent book on English Pen Artists, has treated of other ways in which drawings on prepared papers may be manipulated for the type press; but not always with success. In that interesting publication, The Studio, there have appeared many valuable papers on this subject, but in which the mechanism of illustration is perhaps too much insisted on. Some of the examples published in this connection, of mixed drawings, and of chalk-and-pencil reproductions, might well deter any artist from adopting such aids to illustration. The fact is, that the use of grained papers is, except at the very best, a makeshift and a degradation of the art of illustration, if judged by the old standards. It will be a bad day for the art of England when these mechanical appliances are put into the hands of young students in art schools. For the purposes of ordinary illustrations we should keep to the simpler method of line. All these contrivances require great care in printing, and the blocks have often to be worked up by an engraver. The material of the process blocks is unsuited to the purpose. In a handbook for students of illustration this requires repeating on nearly every page. As a contrast to the foregoing, let us look at a sketch in pure line by the landscape painter, Mr. M. R. Corbet, who, with little more than a scribble of the pen, can express the feeling of sunrise and the still air amongst the trees. SUNRISE IN THE SEVERN VALLEY. (MATTHEW R. CORBET.) The recent remarkably successful reproductions of pencil and chalk drawings by the half-tone process in The Studio and other art magazines have only been possible by reas...
